Dear Mike:

I am writing this letter to let you know how pleased our law firm is with the multi-phased office expansion and renovation project handled by Constantine Commercial Construction earlier this year. You already know that we are extremely pleased with the new space. It looks great and was completed on time with the most minimal amount of interruption to our employees as your crew worked in and around our busy law firm.

Much of the credit for the success of the project truly belongs to the Project Superintendent, Allan Corbin, as well as the Project Manager, Chris Ackers. They managed the subcontractors, project timelines and the day-to-day issues that arose over our six-month project like true professionals. When the plans varied or needed modifications or something wasn't as they thought it should be, Allan and Chris were on top of the issues and solving them, often before we even knew about them. Allan was on-site every day throughout the project and would proactively identify issues and offer solutions before walls came down, walls went up, fixtures were installed, etc. Until the project was complete, Allan was there to make sure everything was done right, done on time and done to our satisfaction.

The degree of professionalism, sophistication and perseverance that you, Allan Corbin, Chris Ackers, Vic Cole and the entire Constantine staff demonstrated throughout the project was impressive. As you have shown us often over the years, our selection of Constantine Commercial Construction proved to be the right one and we appreciated the level of dedication, experience and intelligence exhibited by the entire Constantine Commercial Construction team.

Very truly yours,

Barry C. Greenberg
